

Meet the Grower

Miller Amish Chicken Orland, IN

Miller Poultry is a small, family-owned company located in Northern Indiana. There are many positive reasons that this fact is beneficial for you, the consumer. When a company goes to the extent to put their own name on the product, it adds a whole different element, it becomes personal, real personal. We want it right and we want it right every time.

Our chicks are hatched at our own hatchery and placed primarily on Amish family farms. The birds are raised inside naturally ventilated, curtain sided, houses and are free to roam on open floors. They are fed an all-vegetable, drug free diet and are hormone and antibiotic free.

Antibiotic free - our chickens are raised on all vegetable feed that is ground at our feed mill from corn and soybeans. No antibiotics are added. Labels can be confusing - with terms like "free-range" on the label it does not mean that it is antibiotic free. There is no requirement that free-range chickens be antibiotic free.

All Vegetable fed - The feed is a mixture of corn, soybeans, minerals, salt and vitamins that is mixed at our own feed mill and there are no animal by products, animal fats or coloring added, never.

Our aim is to provide a perfect product in a perfect package in perfect condition every single time. We are driven to do the absolute best we can for you and encourage your comments to help us achieve our goal.
