

Meet the Grower

Meet the Rabbit Indianapolis, IN

Quality Game Meats.
Locally Grown.
Natural.

Meat the Rabbit is committed to sustainable agriculture practices — which means buying from local farms, ensuring profitability for the growers, and holding our growers to high-standards for hormone-free, antibiotic-free meats. We do not source our products from factory farms. Our growers are small family farms that are involved in their own community and proud to be a part of the local food supply.

When we set out to develop a market for locally-grown rabbit in the Midwest, we heard one thing consistently from Chefs: I'd put it on the menu if I knew I could get it consistently. So offer just that—a consistent, reliable supply of high-quality, all-natural, locally-sourced rabbit.

We are committed to sustainable ag practices—buying from local family farms, ensuring profitability for our growers, and holding them to high-standards for hormone-free, antibiotic-free meats.

It's an honor to be a part of the local food economy, and we would love to see our product on your table.
